

Marc Jaromin, Buckeye Broadband

A 25 year veteran of the television industry, Marc is currently the Director of Media Operations for Buckeye Broadband. Marc's work group responsibilities include Advertising Sales, Creative Services, the regional sports and arts networks, BCSN & BCAN, as well as Community Relations.

Prior to joining Buckeye, Marc was as the owner/operator of Roundtable Broadcasting, building a unique portfolio of local television stations, multi-platform shared services, and new revenue development opportunities.

Marquee companies within Roundtable's ownership portfolio included Mojo Brands Media; an Orlando based national sales, marketing and production company specializing in brand integrations and the convergence of video programming and social media messaging, The Daily Buzz, a 12 year, 140 market, morning show that was one of five nationally produced and distributed programs.

Prior to Mojo Brands Media, Marc owned and operated the Fox, MyNet, and MeTV affiliates in Jackson, Mississippi.

Other Roundtable Broadcasting projects included Stratus Broadcast Services, a Davenport, Iowa company providing broadcast television station shared services including news, master control, and asset management for 27 network and PBS affiliated television stations across the country.

Always active in the industry, Marc is presently an Associate Dean in the National Association of Broadcaster's Leadership Training Program, an industry recognized executive MBA style program based in Washington, DC.
